30 Days Suit Sale

Beginning
December 1st.

About every so often we come to you with a story of saving. Haven't you noticed it? Just now our main thought is how best to turn men's and boys clothing into money.

Regular prices wouldn't do it quick enough so we've made them irregular. We've gone around among the whole suit assortment and have put new figures on them. Figures smaller than the others. Smaller by a quarter—by a third where we could afford it.

These suits are all new—just arrived this fall—and consist of the newest patterns and styles. Perfect fitting and all sizes.

The School Board held a meeting on Wednesday to consider applications for the position of teachers in the School. The Board commenced proceedings at 10 a. m. and did not get through till 6.30 p. m. There were about 150 applications and the Board had not reached a decision when they adjourned.

To the Ratepayers:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

At the request of a large number of friends I have decided to come out as a candidate for Mayor for the coming year.

Having served on the Council for the last two years I am in touch with the work that has been going on and also the requirements for the coming year. During the past two years I have tried, to the best of my ability, to devote a good share of my time to the interests of the town as a whole. One of my main objects in view is to have the affairs of the town run as economically as possible, and as you will notice in the financial report we have been fairly successful this year. This method if followed up and enforced still stronger will enable us during the coming year to lower the tax rate, to look after the suburbs of the town (where considerable improvements are needed) as well as the main portions of the town, and have a clear sheet at the end of the year.

With this end in view I appeal to you for your support at the polls on Monday, December 13th.

Yours respectfully,
O. W. HEMBLING.

To the Ratepayers of the Town of Didsbury:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I am a candidate for the position of Mayor of your town.

I beg to ask you for your vote on Monday next. If you do me the honor of electing me it will be my aim to work for the interests of all parts of the town.

Thanking you for your confidence in me in the past, and hoping to merit a continuance of the same confidence in the future,

I am,
Yours faithfully,
H. B. ATKINS.

To the Ratepayers of Didsbury:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

At the nomination meeting on Monday last my name was brought forward for Councillor for 1910-11, and I would solicit your vote and influence for my election on Monday next. If elected I will fill the position to the best of my ability and to the best interests of the ratepayers.

Respectfully yours,
B. A. ST. CLAIR.

To the Electors of the Town of Didsbury:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

As several of the ratepayers have expressed the wish that I should again become a candidate for the position of Councillor I have allowed my name to be placed before the electorate for their approval or disapproval and would ask for your vote and influence on Monday next if you think my past record as Councillor is satisfactory to you.

If elected I will still continue to use my best judgement and efforts for the benefit of the ratepayers and the advancement of the town as economically as possible.

Yours to command,
H. E. OSMOND

TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING THE BASIS OF SUCCESS.

Since the Ingredients Entering Peruna Are Known, its Power as a Cataract Remedy and Tonic is Understood.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—The active ingredients entering the most popular household remedy in the world have been made known to the public. This means a new era in the advertising of popular family medicines—Peruna leads.

Peruna contains among other things, golden seal, powerful in its effect upon the mucous membranes. Cedron seed, a rare medicine and unsurpassed tonic. Cubeb, valuable in nasal catarrh and affections of the kidneys and bladder. Stone root, valuable for the nerves, mucous membranes as well as in dropsy and indigestion.

Hotel Etiquette

"We had finished dinner in the little unpainted hotel," said Miss Marie Booth Russell, "and I was waiting for dessert, which had been ordered. The redheaded waitress hung anxiously about the table, and I was anxiously awaiting dessert. Finally I lost all patience and told her we could not wait all the afternoon for her."

"Well, if you was through," she said, "why didn't you stack up your dishes?"

If Your Baby Is Sick Give Baby's Own Tablets

The little ills of babyhood and childhood should be treated promptly, or they may prove serious. An occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets will regulate the stomach and bowels and keep your little ones well. Or they will promptly restore health if sick, nervous or unexpecting. Mrs. L. M. Thompson, Oil Springs, Ont., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my little girls as occasion required, and have found them always of the greatest help. No mother, in my opinion, should be without the Tablets." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Flying machines don't cost enough to run over to be as much fun as automobiles.

Signs of Poverty

Seeing a train hurrying away from a large house, a fellow professional asked him what luck he had met with. "It isn't what I asked," he replied. "I just got a peep through the window. It's a poverty-stricken one, mate. There was actually two ladies playing on one piano!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

YOUTHFUL TERRITORIALS.

British New Army of Recognized Boy Cadets Flourishing.

Now that the Territorial Army is practically in full development, the War Office is turning its attention to the organization of cadet corps formed of boys over 12 years of age. The authorities have just issued in a draft form the regulations for cadet corps, which are to be submitted to the Territorial Associations for consideration. The regulations, if approved, will not have effect before the beginning of the financial year 1904-5. The cadet corps mentioned in the new regulations must not be confused with what were known as the cadet corps before the days of the Territorial scheme. These latter, raised by all the great public schools, are now officers' training corps, and have their definite place in recruiting for the commissioned ranks of the Territorial Force. The cadet corps with which the new regulations are dealing are those partially organized bodies belonging to many of the secondary and elementary schools. The regulations do not give official recognition to any cadet corps, under the new system. "Unless it is likely to furnish recruits to the Territorial Force," Cadet corps, also, must be kept in being, except for grants in kind, which will include:

Thirty rounds of miniature ammunition per man, under certain conditions.

Rifles or carbines and side-arms as may be available.

Free use of Government land for camps and Government rifle ranges.

Every cadet corps will be affiliated, as soon as it is properly organized and recognized, to the Territorial Force, and will be direct under a Territorial unit may, at the commanding officer's discretion, be excused some of the general training.

Moreover, their cadet corps after the age of 15 will be allowed to count for the Territorial Force Decoration. In the ordinary way cadets will only be allowed to join in their own right, and will be eligible to join the Territorials, except in school corps, when they will be allowed to stay as long as they are at the school. No boy under the age of 12 will be admitted to any corps. Arms carried by reserve cadets will be exempt from run license duty. To assist county associations in meeting necessary charges, they will receive annually a grant calculated at the rate of 2s. for every 100 efficient cadets.

An Eton Character.

Stockholm, the Montem pool, used to be quite a character at Eton. He had been in the navy before he settled at the school and succeeded somehow or other in getting himself recorded as the licensed versifier of current events whenever Montem was celebrated. The quality of his verse was not high, if we may judge from one specimen. It ran as follows:

"In Lord George how many lads were drowned."

A sumner near Spithead, not Plymouth Sound.

And with them went to swell the dreadful news.

A lot of women down, and several Jews."

He has got the main facts of the catastrophe all right, but the method of expressing them seems to leave something to be desired.

Stockholm was blessed with twelve children, when he named Phoebe Rose. Ann, Evelyn, Susan, Violet, Britannia, William Shakespeare Pinder, Isaac Simon, Pauline Granby, Silver, Amy Ann, Georgina, Arthur, Mary Maude, Paul, Pauline, Herbert William, and Saul Henry. It is wonderful that with all these children of ability they did not combine to murder their devastating progenitor. Stockholm seems to have possessed a good deal of humor, however, and some real talent as an improvisator. George B. Hill always gave him a piece of gold on the Fourth of June.—From "Eton Memories," by an Old Etonian.

Giants In the House.

Mr. J. Cathcart Watson, M.P., who recently gave a luncheon to Sir Joseph Ward, New Zealand's Premier, is one of two brothers in the House, the other being the Right Hon. Eugene Watson. They are the tallest and heaviest M.P.s. The former represents the most northerly constituency in the British Isles—namely, Orkney and Shetland—and he has completely won the hearts of his constituents. When he lands from the steamer, as all must do, in a boat, he does not wait for the little craft to be pulled up high and dry on the beach, but just puts his leg over the gunwale and wades boldly through the surf. On shore he strides from one group of fishermen to another in his high boots, and you hear a constant succession of "Hoos" as "ye Sandy" "weel, Andra, hoos as ye day!" Thus it is he has secured the devotion of the men.

TORTURED BY PILES.

Could Not Rest. Could Not Walk. Could Not Play!

How Zam-Buk Brought Relief.

Mr. Julius Glacier of Donmeh, Ont., says:—"I was so tortured by piles that I could not get ease whether sitting, standing or lying down. The ailment robbed me of strength, of appetite, and of all desire to live! I had suffered so long and so acutely that I came to think there was no cure for me, but one day I found out that I was wrong!"

"I was told that Zam-Buk cured piles, and that this balm was altogether different to ordinary ointments, sores of which had proved useless for so long a case as mine was. I got a supply of Zam-Buk, and began to use it regularly."

"Without going into unnecessary detail in a few weeks I found myself cured. I hardly nurse, eat, sleep, sit, and I trust my experience will be the means of leading other sufferers to try this great healing balm."

Nothing need be added to this plain, powerful testimony save one question—If you suffer like Mr. Glacier did, why not get relief from the same source as he did?"

"It is a proved cure for inflamed areas (as in piles), erysipelas, eczema, ulcers, sores, abscesses, cold cracks, chapped hands, hemorrhoids, scabs, sores, and all skin injuries and diseases. It is the most suitable balm for children's rashes, and is sold at Stores at a box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price."

"I hear that Jones' four daughters are married."

Is that so? I suppose he's glad he's got them off his hands."

"Not exactly. He now has to keep the four husbands on their feet."

LA GRIFFE

Arrested, and Consumption Cured

Mr. G. D. Colwell, of Walkerville, Ont., was stricken down with La Grippe in 1900, and a little time in very bad condition. He says I was always down and bordering on Consumption. I could not sleep at night, had no appetite, and coughed nearly the whole time. This is how I was when I began to take Psychine, in a few persons state but the first day I began to improve. I did marvel for me and thought me back to health in no time, making a new man of me. I feel the body against the attacks of La Grippe and is a sure preventative. I always take Psychine if I feel a cold coming on and it puts me right in no time."

A Model Love-Letter.

Australia is a great country for competition. The Victorian mining city of Ballarat which returns Alfred Deskin to the Federal Parliament, has had a love-letter competition, which proved so attractive as to draw competitors from all over the Empire. It closed a few days ago, with the interesting result that the first prize was awarded to an English lady, Miss Gertrude Leighton of Black Edd, Cornwall. The letter judged to be the best ran thus:

"To My Imaginary Correspondent: You ask me to forgive you. What can you ever do, sweetheart, which for one moment could make me forget what you are to me, or that love which has made earth heaven, and my life a joy! Have I to forgive the sun for lurking behind the clouds when he has shone on my days and made them golden; or shall I welcome him the less when he comes forth to warm me again? Beloved, if I have to forgive it is that you, I hold, have asked the question. I have no desire to know anything, except that you have loved me and love me still. My faith is unquestioning, for have I not crowned you king, and the king can do no wrong? These eyes of mine which have closed beneath your kisses, are sightless until your lips unseal them. My ears have caught to the magic call of the voice of my beloved, and my heart has ceased to beat until it is throbbing yours. I am sleeping, and shall awaken but at the sound of your footsteps."

Painting in the Dark.

Considerable interest will doubtless be aroused at the forthcoming exhibition of the English Salon at the Albert Hall, by the work of Mr. H. K. Raine, a young artist who paints portraits in a light so subdued as to seem to the new-comer's eyes almost total darkness. He has invented a portable shutter for regulating the light of a room, and is thus able to paint his sitters in their own homes. One result of his method is that his portraits with extraordinary speed. Sitings of about half an hour before and after luncheon for one week are all that he demands. Mr. Raine makes his own oil, canvas, and colors by a secret process, and anyone who will the distinct similarity between his colors and those of the old Dutch colorists.

Artificial Limbs For Animals.

The supplying of artificial limbs to animals by no means uncommon. A well-known London firm fitted a cow with a wooden leg as far back as twenty-five years since, and some time ago the Comte de Paris had a valued log fitted with a leg of wood and leather. The late Col. North had a new foot supplied to a greyhound valued at $5,000, and Lord Lonsdale replaced in the possession of a wood-elegged bullock.

The Battle Is On

Candidates for municipal honors were rather scarce up to within a few minutes of the closing of nominations which shows that there are not many men who are willing to sacrifice their time and talents to serve the public. However, the ones who were nominated were all good men and those who are elected will likely make good during the coming year.

The mayoralty contest is likely to be a close one as both candidates have a large number of supporters. Messrs. O. W. Hembling and H. B. Atkins are the contestants for this honor.

Mr. Hembling's work on the Council for the past two years, especially as a member of the Board of Works, speaks largely for him as an energetic worker in the interests of the town and one who if elected as Mayor would still retain the same interests at heart.

Mr. Atkins was a member of the Council in 1907 and 1908 but retired last year.

One thing is sure, the present Council have certainly not been laggards in the interests of the town as a partial report of the Financial statement given in another column shows. The statement reports a deficit of only $17.40 as compared with $1671.70 last year, and if the same system of financing is kept up next year the ratepayers should certainly be in line for a reduction of the tax rate. There will be no need of the heavy expenditures the present Council were put to in purchasing fire fighting appliances, and the cost of opening up the crossing will be eliminated. A policy of economy can be maintained which should go a long way towards this and it is to be hoped that the new Mayor and Council whoever they may be will work to this end in view.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE BEST SOLACE FOR OUR OWN GRIEF IS TO LIGHTEN THE SORROWS OF OTHERS.

For a few moments Malcolm Kirk experienced a feeling of anguish on his own account that shut out entirely the other forlorn and bleeding heart. Then there sprang up in his soul a most tremendous and overpowering resolution of feeling. He said to a very dear friend several years afterward that he stood there on the threshold of his paragon, with the hot, dusty glare of that withering day smiting him and the figure of that old woman on the doorstep, he knew that perhaps the most important event in his own life experience was taking place. For this appeal for help, this cry to him to share a burden while his own seemed greater than he had ever before, revealed to him the Christ life in our human lives and the glory of overcoming the world for his sake. Certain it is that Malcolm Kirk stood there that morning his soul felt the touch of a healing and beneficent love, and he looked at his life again as worth while, and then he gave himself to the work of his own sorrow was destined to make him more servicable to others.

What he actually did the next morning after all this was to ask Mrs. Barton to come into the house. He took her into his study, and then after a single moment he had her seated and went out into the back yard to Dorothy.

She was still sitting on the bench, dry eyed and oblivious of everything around her, living over the last three days. Malcolm came up and put his hand on her shoulder.

"Dear," he said very gently, "will you come with me into the house? There is some one there who has come to see me—see us both."

She did not know what he meant or hardly what he said, but she rose and went into the house with him.

"Mrs. Barton, this is Mrs. Kirk. I want you to tell her what you have told me."

The little woman could see that something unusual had happened at the paragon, but she could not practically absorb her feelings. She looked at Dorothy, however, with the admiration which her beauty of face often excited in what we call ordinary people.

"Oh, ma'am," she cried, "I've come to see if Mr. Kirk would help me to get my boy home again. He's been drinking. I live in a lonesome place at 'The Forks,' and I don't very often come to town, but I have heard of your husband, and they say people all around have gone to him for help, and I know he will do what he can for me. My boy will be glad to see you. Your husband that some day your baby would grow up into a good Christian man to comfort and bless you. That's what I hoped he would be, and he would do. And he might if the saloon had not tempted him."

She was going on, for her heart was full of her trouble, and she looked at Dorothy's face stopped her.

"Don't you know—has not Mr. Kirk told you that our baby—our baby—died last week?"

The little heartbroken woman looked at Dorothy in astonishment. There was nothing refined or sweet about her, but she gave her the right word to say at that particular time. She rose and with her hands clasped walked over near Dorothy. Malcolm never got that night. "Oh, Mrs. Kirk, may God help you! Forgive me! I have not been to town for several weeks. I did not see the paper last week at all. The last time I knew anything of your baby he was well and happy. I would never have come with my trouble if I had known yours. She paused for a moment, while two tears ran down over her thin cheeks. Dorothy began to sob. She had not cried before since that day when the baby was laid in its coffin; not even at the grave.

"Oh, ma'am," Mrs. Barton went on, "your baby will not be a stranger. My husband was. We lost a good farm back in Ohio on account of the drink, and then my husband died, and I took the boy and went to town. I was there purposely to a lonesome place and took my boy from the town. I may have made a mistake, but I did the best I knew, and I found out that I was in the arms of my father. Oh, ma'am, your heart is sore. I know it, but it's not as sore as mine, for your baby never broke your heart. I would sooner see my boy in his coffin than see him as I have many a time during the past two years. There's trouble and trouble. May God help us to bear our own. But your baby's safe now. How can I tell if mine ever will be?"

She spoke the last words in such a tone of hopeless sadness that Dorothy turned up her head and looked at her. "Don't say that," she said, and the tears flew down her face faster. They were merciful tears. Her heart.

"Oh, Mrs. Kirk, may God help you! Forgive me!"

which had been first found within her as if it would burst, felt the first relief she had known. God was leading her. She still knew that what Malcolm had experienced had come to her also. But the lonely, stricken woman in the little study, representing so much human sorrow of a kind that neither Dorothy nor Malcolm knew, had touched her. She also was able to say to her husband years afterward that he felt as if the coming of that other burden into their own heavy hearted lives was a part of the loving Father's plan for their victory in overcoming the world, the world of what might have grown to be a very selfish sorrow.

What happened, all that was said in that little study room that day, is not easy to tell; but when Mrs. Barton went into Malcolm Kirk's study with her, Dorothy went into her own little room and prayed, and there was that in her prayer that revealed to her the loving Father. For the first time she saw her baby surrounded by the infinite love, and when she came back to her work in the kitchen there were hope, immortality and a large measure of the peace of Christ in her heart.

Malcolm Kirk got into the farm wagon with Mrs. Barton, and they drove down to the main business street of Concord.

"Now, Mrs. Barton," Malcolm had said, "if you will wait outside I'll go into the saloon and see if I can find your boy. While I'm looking you might question passersby and ask them if they have seen the boy wagon and horses anywhere."

She thanked him gratefully, and he noted that even in the burning sun her face was as fresh as a rose. He reached and alighted, and her lips quivered as if she were cold. His compassion for her motherhood increased every moment. "God help her," he said as he stepped down out of the wagon. "This boy is one of the lost ones in this town that Dorothy and I needed ourselves three years ago to rescue. Heaven give me strength and wisdom to make that promise good."

He had never been inside of a saloon in his life. He shrank from the ordered before him with all the shuddering of a highly sensitive spirit in the presence of an ugly, repulsive, hideous evil. But he went at once into the first saloon on the main street and stopped inside near the door and looked around him.

It was not yet 10 o'clock in the morning, but there were a dozen men and boys in the room, which was quite large, seated with stools and furnished with small, round tables. At first his entrance attracted no attention. A few of the men were lounging at the bar. The rest were seated at the tables. But as he remained by the door two or three of those nearest him turned and looked at him. One of the men was a laborer who had been first employed by Malcolm in odd jobs about the house. Instantly Kirk walked over to him and held out his hand. "Carver, do you know Mrs. Barton's boy? Philip is his name. She is looking for him. He left home Saturday, and she is sure he is in one of the saloons some where."

The man looked very much embarrassed. He shuffled his feet nervously in the dirty washstand under the table. "I saw him yesterday. He was in Valmer's place in the next block."

"Thank you," said Malcolm slowly. "Can any of you gentlemen tell me anything about him? Has any one seen him today?"

No one answered, and there was a painful silence. The barkeeper, who had been eyeing Kirk, suddenly broke the silence by saying with a short laugh:

"You won't find him here. I won't say he hasn't been here. He knows a good thing when he sees it. Won't you step up and take a glass of beer this morning? We keep the best in the town on tap for preachers."

There was a laugh from one or two of the men nearest the speaker, but Malcolm simply looked him in the face without a word. He then laid his hand on Carver's shoulder and said softly:

"I'm sure to see you here, Carver. You promised me you would quit. It didn't say a word. Kirk looked at him sorrowfully.

"Come, Carver; come out of this. I'll give you something to do. Don't lose your soul in this place."

"Stay," said the barkeeper, who had been leaning with his elbows on the bar listening, as had also every other man in the saloon. "You leave my customers alone, will you, and mind your own business?"

"That's just what I am doing," replied Kirk earnestly, and as he spoke, his pale blue eyes filled with a high, white light. "It is my business to destroy your business, Man, do you know that just outside that door is a mother's broken heart that has helped to break? And here is only one out of thousands all over the world. What say you to that?"

He spoke very quietly, almost softly; his voice did not declaim, but the unusual quality of it thrilled everybody there. He looked into their faces a moment and with a last appealing look at Carver he turned and went out.

"Whew!" said the barkeeper. "First sermon ever delivered here. Score one for Parson Kirk!"

The other men did not respond with much enthusiasm. Carver had risen from the table.

"Better have one before you go," said the saloon keeper.

"I won't drink again today," Carver retorted with an oath which was a curse. He staggered over to the door and went out into the glare of the hot, withering sun. Down the street he could see Kirk just entering Valmer's place.

"I'm half a mind to help Mr. Kirk hunt for the boy," Carver muttered. He hesitated for a moment, then he went down the street, following the minister.

That forenoon Malcolm Kirk went into every saloon in Concord, but he failed to get any trace of the missing boy. Always behind him, unknown to him, Carver staggered. In two or three saloons the men were asked to resist the invitation to drink, but he managed to keep just sober enough to know where Kirk was and to follow him.

DEEP - SEATED COUGH

CURED IN FIVE HOURS.

New Home-Made Syrup.

(Cut this out.)

From Boston Press.

Progress in medical compounds never ceases, and now it is stated by a prominent medical man that any deep-seated cough, whether it is a cold, or a croup, or a whooping cough, can be actually cured in five hours by the clock. Opium and morphine have been resorted to in the past, as a relief measure. But now it is learned that the system must be treated to rid it of inflammation and loosen the work so quickly and thoroughly as to be almost magical. What heretofore has taken weeks to cure can be accomplished in hours. Get this formula filled or mix it at home and always keep it on hand. One-half ounce fluid white cherry bark, one ounce compound essence of cod liver and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Shake the bottle and take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then take one or two teaspoonfuls three or four times a day until the system is purified and toned up. Give children less according to age. One filling will usually cure a whole family, as the dose is small.

A man has to go to a dentist to have his tooth pulled, but he can go almost anywhere and have his leg pulled.

It is a Liver Pill.—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver, which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulations now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Parnelle's Veg-Table Pills. Their operation through gentle is effective, and the most delicate can use them.

Lesson XI.—Fourth Quarter, For

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Tim. iv, 1-18.
Memory Verses, 6-8—Golden Text,
Psalm, I-11—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

In our last study for the present on the life of Paul it would seem wise to glance at the whole epistle rather than only at the last chapter. He is still of the same mind as when he wrote I Cor. ii, 2, determined to know nothing save Jesus Christ and Him crucified, for in this brief letter he mentions the Father, Son and Holy Spirit forty-eight times. His mind is entirely upon the Lord, concerning whom he says, "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep."

Our lesson chapter opens with a solemn charge in view of the judgment, and we are reminded of Ecclesi. xii, 13, 14, "Know that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment." Let us remind ourselves that the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son, even as He honor the Father (John v, 22, 23). Believers who have died and who are waiting for the resurrection, are with all living believers who shall be in a number changed, shall appear for judgment at the judgment seat of Christ for belief only. There will be the judgment of living nations when He shall come with His saints to establish His kingdom, and a thousand years later the judgment of the rest of the dead at the great white throne. In due time and in due order there shall be a resurrection both of the just and the unjust and a judgment of all that have ever lived.

As His witnesses, His messengers, we are therefore to "preach the word" (I Tim. iv, 13), to preach the preaching which He bids us (John iii, 2; Jer. i, 7; Ezek. ii, 7; III, 11), being warned, as were the prophets and apostles, that men will not endure it, but, having pleasure more than God and being satisfied with a form of godliness will not endure it. He will prefer lying doctrine and delusion to the truth of God (I Tim. xii, 13; II Tim. ii, 16). The word for the faithful witness is: "Watch, endure, fulfill thy ministry," (I Tim. iv, 13). He who has chosen this "study to show thyself approved unto God" (I Tim. iv, 13). Many things look different when we come to the hour of our departure, but if by His grace we have fought the good fight of faith and have kept the faith (I Tim. iv, 13; II Tim. iv, 12) we may have boldness even in the day of judgment (I John iv, 17). Fitness to meet Him depends wholly upon His great and all-sufficient sacrifice for us. But we must be approved as His redeemed ones unless we have run the race well and been good soldiers of Jesus Christ. Our safety depends upon Him alone; we cannot depend upon our own strength. The crown here spoken of is the crown of righteousness—was not for Paul only, but for all who have this appearing virtue. The crown of life is for a patient endurance, the crown of incorruptible self denial, the crown of rejecting for winning souls, the crown of enduring for feeding the flock—four different lines of service. But this one is for an attitude of soul in all our service. Many served one and did not love His appearing, and many postmillennialists would be glad to see Him and may be said to love His appearing, although not looking for Him so near or in the same way as some others. If we receive one or more of all of these crowns it will be that we may rest them at His feet and give Him all the glory (I Tim. iv, 10, 11). These crowns, or rewards, are not given us when we die, although it is a common mistake to think of them as such. They are given to us when we are alive, but they are not given us until we are dead. They are given us when we are alive, but they are not given us until we are dead. They are given us when we are alive, but they are not given us until we are dead.

A GOOD COUGH MIXTURE

Simple Home-Made Remedy That Is Free From Opiates and Harmful Drugs.

An effective remedy, that will usually break up a cough in twenty-four hours, is easily made by mixing together in a large bottle two ounces of Glycerine, a half-ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure and eight ounces of pure Whiskey. This mixture will cure any cough that is curable, and is not expensive, as it makes enough to last the average family an entire year. Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure is prepared only in the laboratories of the Leach Chemical Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

couraged himself in the Lord's name (I Sam. xxi, 6). No one could be more alone than our Blessed Lord, but His comfort may be seen in these words: "The living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father." "He that sent Me is with Me; the Father hath not left Me alone, for I do always those things that please Him" (John vi, 57; viii, 29). Notice Paul's one great occupation, "that the preaching might be fully known and that all the Gentiles might hear," and remember that Christ hath sent us as the Father sent Him to be His witness.

There's nothing that requires such constant repairing as a good resolution.

Seven Candidates for Municipal Honors

Monday was nomination day for placing candidates in the field for the forthcoming municipal elections and to hear the reports to the ratepayers of the town and school finances.

There was rather a poor attendance of ratepayers up to nearly the time of closing the nominations, whether because of the cold weather or because of indifference it would be hard to say, perhaps both had some effect on the turnout.

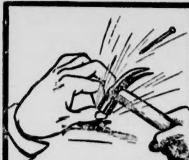

The reports read by Secretary Reed were received by the ratepayers present with applause and on motion of Mr. C. Hebert, seconded by Dr. Weart were adopted; Mr. Hebert in making the motion complimented both the School Board and the Council on the showing made on the Financial report. (The report will be published in the near future.)

The nominations for Mayor, Councillors and School Trustees were then taken up as follows:
For Mayor—D. W. Hembling and H. B. Atkins.

For Councillors—H. E. Osmond, M. Moyer, J. A. Gilmore, B. A. St. Clair and D. C. Corbitt.

For School Trustees—Wm. Rupp and G. B. Sexsmith. As these were the only gentlemen nominated for Trustees they were elected by acclamation with cheers.

The members to retire from the Council this year are Messrs. Hembling, Osmond and Moyer who are all in the field again.

Say a GOOD Word

It is wise to say a good word for yourself or your business, whether your stock in trade be merchandise or labor. Want Ads. are the most direct line of communication to the best buyers.

A Comparison

The financial report of town affairs given by Secretary Reed on Monday was certainly a cause for congratulation from the ratepayers present at the meeting and shows a decided improvement over the last year's statement.

This year the receipts were $7,344.13 and expenditures $7,391.53, leaving a deficit of $47.40 with about $400 to be collected in taxes.

Last year the deficit was $1671.76, with a good deal larger amount of uncollected taxes.

The ratepayers were given an estimate of the total property assets of the town last year which amounted to $8,226.49. This year the total property assets are $4,157.49.

EACH ONE A LEADER IN ITS OWN PARTICULAR LINE

The evenings are growing long and cold. An easy chair and a paper beside the heater begin to look good. It is time to decide what papers to take; we say papers, for the time is past when the farmer is satisfied with one periodical in his home. Here is an offer that will interest you now, and meet the needs of readers of both sexes, young and old, during the long winter months when the papers have become family friends.

There is the Weekly Press and Prairie Farmer, with the news of the world and live departments for the farmer, his wife and the young people; The Nor'-West Farmer, issued twice a month, the recognised farm paper of the west; The Western Home Monthly, full of bright stories and interesting information for every member of the family.

These three publications, including your own home paper with all the local happenings, four papers in all for $3 a year.

Find enclosed the sum of $3.00 for which send the papers mentioned below to the following address or addresses—
